THE JEW AND THE NON-JEW

The Cathedral of St. John the Divine is the Episcopalian Cathedral of New York City. Its unfinished pillars raise their heads on the brow of New York City that is known as Morningside Heights. The building of the Cathedral was commenced under the leadership of Bishop Potter, than whom there was no more liberal Christian divine. Under the leadership of Dr. Manning, who is now the Bishop of New York City, a campaign is on to complete the Cathedral and make it the biggest Cathedral in America.

Bishop Manning has stressed even a greater thought—New York City should have a structure rearing its spires Godward to show that New York is more than a city of cave-dwellers, counters and smoke stacks, but a great spiritual center.

Toward this fund to raise five million dollars to complete the Cathedral many prominent Jews have contributed. Their contributions were given without any strings attached. They were free-will offerings. They showed that the Jew is willing to help the non-Jew in their common struggle Godward. John D. Rockfeller, Jr., also offered a handsome subscription but it had a catch to it. He wanted the Bishop to promise that the Directorate of this Cathedral would have non-Episcopalians on its Board. The request was refused, and I believe quite properly.

I believe that the participation of the Jews in the campaign to complete the Cathedral is in harmony with traditional Jewish practice and Jewish belief. Neither is this the first time that Jews have manifested their friendship toward their fellow-citizen non-Jews. An old record dating back to 1711 shows that the Jews of New York City contributed to the erection of Trinity Church which now stands on Broadway facing Wall Street and of which Bishop Manning was once the rector.

The teachings of the Jew from the Bible to modern times are replete with the friendliness of the Jew toward the non-Jew. The Jew has never, in all his history in spite of the hostility which he has all too often encountered, shown any spirit of retaliation. His attitude has always been of "malice toward none and charity for all."

The Bible begins with the story of Man, not with the history of the Jew. The fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man is the most fundamental principle of Judaism according to our prophets and sages. Ben Talmon [illegible] the verse (Genesis v, 1) is the most comprehensive root rule of the Bible. It is put at the beginning of the Bible to teach the basic principle that all human beings are alike, made in God's image, descended from the same human pair, so that no one shall be able to claim to be of nobler birth or superior to his fellow-man, and hence peace, brotherly love and equality should reign among mankind.

The second fundamental teaching of Judaism is "Thou shalt love thy fellow-man." It does not say thy fellow-Jew. Rabbi Akiba said in commenting on this verse that it is the greatest rule of the Torah. Every human being, not merely every Jew, is beloved by God since he is a creature of God who made him. The Jew who loves his fellow-man is merely imitating God. The Ten Commandments, say our Rabbis, were given in the desert of Sinai. Why? The desert is No Man's Land. The Ten Commandments belong to all mankind and the Jews have no special claim on them other than this, that they should strive to live up to them in order to be an example to the other nations of the earth. In this sense and in this sense alone is Israel a chosen people. Israel chose to accept the yoke of the moral law and hence to be a chosen people. Every people can in this sense choose to be a chosen people.

The Jews are not a missionary people in the sense of seeking to convert the rest of the world to Judaism. Their mission is rather to lead the people of the world to the practice of the moral law each in its own way and according to its own light. Rabbinic theology does not make Heaven the exclusive salvation of the Jew. It is open to all non-Jews who practice the seven Noahitic laws. They are: 1. To establish courts of justice. 2. Not to blaspheme the name of God. 3. Not to worship idols. 4. Not to commit adultery. 5. Not to commit murder. 6. Not to commit robbery. 7. Not to eat flesh that has been cut from a living animal. Without saddling themselves with the rigorous ritualism of the Jew, a non-Jew can be saved. This attitude of the Jew toward the non-Jew was already formulated in pre-Christian times.

The attitude of the Jew toward the non-Jew is further borne out by the following considerations:

Jews are commanded to share their charity with the non-Jew and make no discrimination in the administration of charity between Jew and non-Jew. The reason the Talmud gives for this is "in order to further peace and good-will among men." (Mipne darche Hasholom.) Jews are enjoined to extend to non-Jews all social courtesies customary among neighbours. "Receive every man, not only every Jew, with cheerful countenance"

In matters affecting business and the civil law, the Rabbis laid down the legal maxim, "The law of the land shall be thy law" (Dino d'malchutho dino).

The Jewish philosopher, Maimonides, in the Middle Ages expresses well the attitude of the Jew toward Christianity when he said that Christianity and Mohammedanism were instruments in the hands of God to teach men a knowledge of God and to bring about the kingdom of righteousness on earth.

The universalistic note in Judaism sounds forth unbroken from Malachi to modern times. In no time has the prophetic exhortation, "Have we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us? Why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother?" (Malachai ii, 10) needed more insistent reiteration than in our own.

It is unfortunate that the old walls of prejudice built up by the persistence of traditional ignorance continue to be repaired and new walls continue to be erected.

The position of the Jew has always been this. In matters of religion, of a purely theologic, ritual and congregational character, the Jew is different from the non-Jew. But the Jew makes no distinction between Jew and non-Jew in all questions of moral conduct. In law, business relations, social welfare, neighbourly duties and mutual helpfulness, the Jew regards the non-Jew as a brother. In matters pertaining to religious belief, worship and practice, the Jew practices mutual respect and helpfulness.

Let each religion seek to find God in its own way, express its religious ideas through its own forms, train its children in the way of the fathers and cherish the traditions of its people.

Religion is a road leading up the mountain of life toward the peak—God. Every man is entitled to pursue the road Godward that suits him best. As we ascend, each by his path, it is foolish to stop and lose time to argue across as to the respective merits and demerits of the different paths. The test of the road is: does it lead Godward? If for you it does, then follow it, assured that your neighbour is doing likewise up a path which suits him best. It is the striving upwards that counts. It is the progressive striving in this direction that helps. We may never reach the peak but by climbing upwards and onwards, in a spirit of helpfulness, we shorten the path that those that are to follow us will have to traverse. And let us also remember that as we get toward the peak, the roads show a tendency to converge.

Those Jews who have contributed to the Cathedral have good Jewish precedent, and had there been no precedent they would have established a worthy precedent.

In this time of head-hunting among the immigrants and foreign-born, there is simple refreshment in the way Willa Sibert Cather, American author, strikes out at all Americans who regard immigrants as gypsies or peddlers selling "contributions." Miss Cather, interviewed by the New York Times, contrasts the present-day attitude with that of her childhood. Then, she says, most of her neighbours were foreigners, but no one paid any attention to them unless they wanted it. A foreigner was merely a person foreign to the manners and way of living of the others, but not possible prey for reform. Foreigners were just people who had come here to live. To-day, says the author, social workers devote days and nights to turning foreigners into stupid replicas of smug American types, and Americans are obsessed with the passion for Americanizing everything and everybody within reach. This author makes herself distinctive by the simple method of speaking the truth when many tongues and pens are glad to show that the immigrant, if admitted at all, should work overtime to approximate the supermen about him. What Miss Cather says is heard so rarely now that she can almost claim originality by the application of plain horse sense to a subject badly in need of such treatment.

"Then why cannot we all dare to be different from each other? Is it so terrible a misfortune? Cannot we build a democracy upon differences, or do we huddle together and conform and try to be alike because we are afraid? America began on fears after the first act of courage that separated Pilgrims from Europe. The Pilgrims were afraid of Indians, so much afraid that when they discovered that their fears were unfounded, they instituted Thanksgiving day. Cannot we trust ourselves to live? Must we fear each new man who is different? Must we 'Americanize' him by stripping him naked? Or shall we Americanize ourselves first by tolerating and then accepting the gifts that he brings us? If we can accept the truth of an immigrant or an artist, the artist and the immigrant will not suffer from this deadly funk. Stop humiliating the immigrant and the artist, and with their aid we may begin to discover America. For Columbus was only a prophet and not a discoverer, and the America we may build is well worth discovery."

—From Edward J. O'Brien's introduction to "The Best Short Stories of 1924."

When Moe Turman, president of New York Young Judaea and manipulator of finance, was sentenced to serve from five years to ten years at Sing Sing for forgery, the judge also recommended that at the end of that time he be deported, for Turman is not a citizen. Commutation of sentence is based on the minimum term of the indefinite sentence, so Turman can't be freed for three years and nine months. The judge included the maximum sentence for second degree forgery and recommended deportation "in order to warn aliens to keep within the law." Since most warnings are for the benefit of aliens these days, there is also a warning to them in the fact that Turman spent his mature years in the United States without becoming a citizen. This was very careless, since the native-born have forgotten how they used to beam with delight on the naturalized citizen and thank him for making America the country it is. With the fostering by many agencies of sentiment adverse to the foreigner, it is not impossible to imagine a day when even naturalization will not be the security it has been in the past.

In an article in the "Nation," Dr. Melville J. Herskovits, anthropologist at Columbia University, assails the present craze for the myth of superiority of North Europeans and lays part of the blame for it upon rash conclusions drawn from scientific research. The writer says that "the problem of who is to settle in this country is not one of race, but of individual fitness and the determination of this fitness is not within our power." Dr. Herskovits stresses the folly of assuming that there are differences in innate intelligence between the racial groups of Europe through false deductions from books and articles by psychologists, and from psychological tests given in the army during the war. He scores the type of reasoning which accepts the translation of army tests constructed for emergency use, into terms of absolute intelligence to show the differences in innate ability of the races to which the men tested belong. Dr. Herskovits says that this type of reasoning is responsible for irreparable harm in the immigration legislation which changed quotas to favour North European stock; in the rise of the Nordic mania and the beliefs in the Nordic's innate superiority; in the advocating of laws enforcing the study of English or making the requirements for citizenship more and more difficult. Underlying it all, says the writer, is the dislike of what is different. Dr. Herskovits expresses the hope that the Nordic myth will go the way of all crazes and that the problem of immigration will be put on an economic and social basis "without vague hypotheses concerning racial intelligence."

Rights of Jews in Schools Argued

The rights of Jews to act on the Protestant Board of School Commissioners of Montreal and the justice of appointing Jewish teachers on the Protestant schools of that city were argued before the Court of Appeals. Five Judges' Division, in Quebec on Monday morning. Justice Greenshields presided, while the other members of the tribunal were Justices Flynn, Tellier, Rivard and Letourneau.

The Protestant Board of School Commissioners was represented by George A. Campbell, K.C., and Mr. Laurendeau, and the Jewish interests by Messrs. Bercovitch and St. Laurent.

Charles Lanctot, K.C., assistant Attorney-General, appeared on behalf of the Provincial Government to maintain the constitutionality of the Provincial legislation governing the schools of Montreal.

The greater part of the morning session was consumed by legal argument to determine the definition of the word "denomination" as used in the British North America Act; and to determinate the status of the Jews under the terms of the school legislation.

The issue was clouded for a time by taking the term "denomination" to mean a section of the Protestant church, the general meaning, but it was finally decided that the word meant either Protestant or Catholic.

Justice Greenshields was of the opinion that the Provincial school statute in question really made a Protestant of the Jew, "but," he added, "if you call the Jew a Protestant, then I am equally entitled to call him a Catholic." He believed the task of the present tribunal was to determine whether or not the Jew is a Protestant within the meaning of the existing statutes. Later he gave the opinion that the Protestants of Quebec had the right to establish schools and appoint trustees and this right could not be interfered with by Provincial authority.

Nevertheless, the Protestant should not be burdened with the education of people who did not pay school taxes. Mr. Bercovitch here interrupted to point out that this was not the position of the Jew, and the President of the Tribunal concurred in this. Later, however, he gave figures to show that 14,000 Jews attended the Montreal schools without paying for their education, a statement to which Mr. Bercovitch voiced strenuous objection, asking on what authority Justice Greenshields made this statement. The President said he would give the reference later.

JEWISH CHILDREN'S HOME

A meeting of the Jewish Children's Home takes place at the home, 336 Annette Street, Tuesday, March 3rd, at 2.30 p.m.

DO YOU KNOW?

ARE YOU ACQUAINTED with the work the Mothers' and Babes' Summer Rest Home of the Hebrew Maternity Aid Society is doing?

DO YOU KNOW that in the past three years we have accommodated 145 mothers and 325 children, which were recommended through Federation, Immigrant Aid, and Maternity Aid Society Folks Ferein, etc.? Last year we had to disappoint about fifty families owing to lack of funds and housing.

We believe in conservation of home life, by preventing the mother from physical breakdown.

HAVE YOU SEEN our sixteen-roomed home situated on the lake front at Bronte, where the mothers and children get the best of medical attention by our professional nurse in charge, along with fresh air, and kosher food?

DO YOU KNOW that ours is the only Jewish organization dispensing this class of work for mothers and babes, and therefore, relieving many other organizations of a great responsibility?

DO YOU KNOW that all mothers and children left the camp with a gain in weight from two to eight pounds, and in cheerful spirit to again face the trials of life?

$3,500 is required for our activities this summer as we hope to enlarge our camp and thereby give many more of the unfortunate mothers their much-needed rest and attention.

IT IS ONLY through the whole hearted co-operation of everyone that this work can be made possible for this coming summer, as so many of these very families are suffering the winter's ills and are left in undernourished condition and look forward to a vacation to recuperate.

Before preparing your "Purim dinner," visit the Purim bazaar where everything can be bought from fish to raw and roasted chicken, also from a pin to a 1900 washer.

Friday night services. Sermon, Rabbi Freund: "The Symphony of Existence." Short services Saturday morning. Tuesday night, Rabbi Freund addressed the Study Circle of the Council of Jewish Women on "The Jewish Child in Literature and Tradition," the first of a series of lectures he will deliver to this group. At the Bnai Brith meeting, Wednesday night, Rabbi Freund outlined the work of the Big Brother Committee of which he is chairman. A pamphlet entitled, "The United Hebrew Association of Hamilton, What It Is and What It Can Be," distributed to all the Jewish citizens of Hamilton, was compiled by Rabbi Freund and P. Phillips. Arrangements are being made at the Religious School for a Purim entertainment.

THE UNITED HEBREW ASSOCIATION

The United Hebrew Association of Hamilton which has functioned since 1916 is being re-organized.

Housed in its own home at 58 Vine Street, it is not only a charitable institution, but also a community centre. The Talmud Torah uses its rooms for classes six days a week. The Council of Jewish Women, Hadassah Chapter, Jewish National Workers' Alliance, Ladies' Auxiliary, the Jewish National Workers, Hebrew Free Loan Association, United Hebrew Undertaking Association, Hamilton Hebrew Benevolent Society, V'ad HaKashruth, all meet at the United Hebrew Building.

The new executive committee of the United Hebrew Association is now laying plans for a new building. Total expenditures of the organization from 1916 to 1924 were $30,616.51.

The economic depression and the new immigrant families that have been received into the Jewish community will necessitate larger expenditures for this year. A finance committee was organized to enlarge the membership of the Association, and a campaign is being launched.

The philanthropic work of the organization consists in temporary and permanent relief of needy individuals and families and in shelter and transportation for stranded persons. To obviate duplicity and encouraging of pauperism, the charity committee has convened a council of every Jewish charity organization in the city, and Miss Jean McCoy, featured soubrette, and Ralph Walton, principal comedian, will head the numerous and talented coterie of vaudeville specialists with Bernard & Lorraine's entertaining burlesque, "Happy Go Lucky" at the Empire Theatre, week of March 2. Turner Brothers, comedians, acrobats, tumblers, singers and dancers, will be another act recruited from vaudeville for Columbia Burlesque. Then, too, with the attractive presence of a singing and dancing chorus, Willie McCabe, Sid Lorraine, Dubert Armstrong and Nell Gilbert, Emily Keller, Warren Hewitt and Eleanor Van will variously entertain.

BEING A DISSERTATION ON HATS AND AN ACTRESS WHO TRIMS THEM

Since the beginning of time, a woman's hat has been the defenseless target for man's humor, good and bad. Perhaps not since the very beginning, for Eve, it is likely, never wore a hat. We are under the impression that in all the pictures of her we have seen, her head has been uncovered. But the first hat to make its appearance, whether worn by Pharaoh's daughter or the Queen of Sheba, was no doubt greeted by hoots of derision. Anthony, it may be supposed, in his calmer moments, indulged in occasional good-humored jest about Cleopatra's high upstanding headgear, name unknown.

It may be argued, of course, that if a woman would choose the right kind of a hat, a man's witticisms would become inanities. But there are so few of "the right kind." Too often the unobtrusive hat is the unbecoming one, and as they say, vice versa. Too seldom is the ideal in millinery reached—the hat that is full of colour, line, adornment and at the same time unpretentious.

Miss Jean McCoy, prima donna of the Happy-Go-Lucky Company at the Empire, was a milliner before she went upon the stage, and to-day she trims all her own hats. The other members of the company frequently compliment her on the good taste she displays in selecting the right trimming for her hats as well as for the manner in which she arranges the trimming. Miss McCoy's friends say there is little opportunity for her hats becoming the defenseless target for men's humor.

SHEA'S

Nonette, the singing violiniste, is one of the headline attractions at Shea's Theatre next week. Nonette is a pupil of the famous Belgian violinist, Ysaye, who repeatedly declared her the most promising material that ever came into his hands for moulding. Her technique and bowing commands respectful attention of the skilled musicians while the soul she puts into her music completely captivates the masses.

Frank Fay, another headline attraction, is one of Broadway's favorite sons. His chatter which is apparently impromptu, is real wit and humor, and his individuality makes it different from any line of patter yet heard.

Joe Rome and Lou Gaut announce themselves as "When Extremes Meet." They are eccentric dancers who vary their dance routine with a little song and a few stories.

Jack Joyce's performance with his wonderful horses begins with an exhibition by a high school horse; this is followed by an example of single horse training and concludes with an exhibition by six fine black horses.

The rest of the bill includes Will and Gladys Ahern in an oddity, "A Spinning Romance," Pearl and Violet Hamilton and Jessie Ferdyce in "Playtime" by Tom Howard, Joseph Griffin and an Aesop's fable.

THE PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE OF THE K.K.K.

The K.K.K. of Kanada tried to secure a charter from the Ontario Government and was refused. I congratulate the Ontario Government on their saneness in refusing to recognize the Knights of the Bedsheet. In denying the K.K.K. the right of a charter, the Government merely declared that it was competent to manage the affairs of the Province and did not require the interference of a hooded bunch of infantiles and irresponsibles who, wherever they exist in the U.S.A., have made themselves a stench in the nostrils of decent law-abiding citizens. I know that the citizenry and press of Ontario are behind the Government in its refusal to recognize an organization whose only reason for existence is that it is anti-Jew, anti-Catholic and anti-Negro. A poor reason indeed. The Klan appeals to people whose mental intelligence is below that of a twelve-year-old, and who through the tomfoolery of the Klan can make believe they are mentally full-grown and mature.

The actions of the Klan have always belied their principles. Their idea of being pro-Protestant has been to be anti-everybody else. White supremacy has to them meant denying the elementary rights of freedom of opportunity to everyone else but Klan members. By Gentile economic freedom, they mean stifling the economic and industrial welfare of the country through boycotting decent citizens and preventing them from making an honest living. Just laws and liberty become to the Klan special favours to Klanites and discrimination against non-K.K.K.'s. Separation of church and state is translated into persecuting those who do not subscribe to the Protestant Christian faith and making the Klan stand for the church and the state. Their ardour for freedom of speech and press has led them to burn newspaper offices, tar and feather independent editors who would not be intimidated by Klan dictation, and wreck their presses. Restrictive and selective immigration as embodied in the U.S.A. quota law is resulting in stunting the growth of the country and working hardships on innocent immigrants. They say they stand for law and order and freedom from mob violence. What a hollow mockery! Lynching, rioting, jail-breaking, substituting the lynchers' noose and the gun for law enforcement and order—these should be the principles of the Klan. They say they stand for higher moral standards. If their actions stand for [illegible] then the K.K.K. are right and we are all wrong. Their idea of public schools means schools where the doctrines of evolution dare not be taught, and where honest teachers are driven from their posts, where sectarian religious instruction is rammed down the throats of non-Protestant children. This has happened in such States where the Klan is in political power. Such are the principles of the Klan.

To be a member of the K.K.K. an applicant must be white, Gentile and Protestant. The privilege is theirs. I feel honoured in not being elegible.

I have sufficient faith in the common sense and the spirit of British fair play of the Protestants in Ontario and Canada to know that the Klan will not find fertile soile here. I do not think the Jews and Catholics ought to feel alarmed, neither do I believe it necessary for them to organize against the Klan. I think the Klan can safely be left in the hands of the Protestants of this Province to deal with them. I am sure that they are deeply ashamed that their good name has been so besmirched by this despicable organization that pretends to represent them.

Rabbi Brickner Called to Cleveland Pulpit

Rev. Dr. Barnett R. Brickner, rabbi since 1920 of the Holy Blossom Toronto Hebrew Congregation, 115-119 Bond Street, when interviewed Wednesday confirmed the report from Cleveland that he has accepted a call to the Euclid Avenue Temple of that city. He will take up his duties in Cleveland in July.

The Euclid Avenue Congregation is one of the very largest Jewish Congregations in America. It has a membership of 1,260 families, a Sunday School containing over 1,200 children, the largest Jewish Sisterhood in America with a membership of 1,600 women, and an unusually large Brotherhood. The Temple Centre building was recently completed at a cost of $350,000. The Temple structure itself is regarded as one of Cleveland's show places. Architects and art critics regard it as unique in synagogal construction and beauty.

Rabbi Brickner is thirty-three years of age. He will succeed Rabbi Louis Wolsey, who served this congregation for eighteen years, and leaves it to accept a call to the Rodelph Sholom Congregation of Philadelphia. Besides being rabbi of the Holy Blossom Congregation which under his leadership changed from Conservatism to Reform in ritual, Rabbi Brickner is also the president of the Toronto Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, of the Ontario Jewish Immigrant Aid Societies, and also serves on the board of numerous non-Jewish institutions and societies engaged in social and educational work. He is editor of the CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW, the Anglo-Jewish weekly which circulates throughout Canada, and his editorials and articles are widely reprinted in England and America. Rabbi Brickner is also one of the board of editors of "The Jew in Canada," which will be published shortly and which is the first history of the Jews in Canada.

Rabbi Brickner is regarded as one of the leaders of Canadian Jewry. He is much in demand as an orator and lecturer before fraternal, church and business men's and women's clubs, and is a member of the General Ministerial Association of Toronto.

He has worked continuously to organize different elements of Toronto Jewry and has also done much to create a better understanding and good-will between Jew and Gentile. His Friday evening lectures at the Holy Blossom Synagogue are always attended by numerous non-Jews as well as Jews. Rabbi Brickner stated that he was leaving Toronto with a feeling of great reluctance, but that the call to Cleveland and the United States was one of a wider sphere of usefulness. He felt too, that having lived in Canada for five years, he would be in a position to interpret Canada and Canadians to their neighbors across the line, and in that way would help to promote that good feeling which has existed between the United States and Canada. He expressed gratitude for the hospitality that Canadians all over the country had extended him.
